HIV and AIDS cases up 15% in senior citizens

By Brenda Bunting
Editor

Talking to seniors in the Glades about their sex lives and sexually transmitted diseases is not a job most people would feel comfortable doing, but Alyx Schaffer, an outreach coordinator for the Senior HIV Intervention Project, (SHIP), is up to the task.

"They tell me real fast, 'It's not our problem. You need to be talking to the teenagers.'"

But it's no longer the teenagers who are most at-risk for AIDS and HIV - it's their grandmothers and grandfathers.

Schaffer is trying to get the message out. She goes to Senior Citizen Centers and wherever else she can get an invitation to tell seniors they are the fastest growing segment of the nation at risk from HIV and AIDS.

"The most alarming fact," said Schaffer, "is that many seniors do not think themselves at risk. They concern themselves about their heart, prostate, lungs, and blood pressure, without ever giving a second thought to their possible exposure to HIV."

Statistics show that 15 percent of the people with AIDS in Florida are 50 or older and the number of cases of HIV infections is growing at an alarming rate. HIV is the virus that results in the incurable disease, AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome).

Doctors may be less likely to discuss HIV and AIDS with their senior patients, as the issue involves delving into the personal lives of the seniors.

In addition, many diseases that raise the red flag of an AIDS infection often mimic the common illnesses associated with aging, including flu symptoms, pneumonia, weight loss, shingles and chronic fungal infections. Once an HIV diagnosis is confirmed, patients often live only a few months.

"HIV has bridged all age, generational, cultural and economic gaps," said Schaffer. "Our mission is to bridge this educational gap."

Anchored out to the Broward County Health Department, Schaffer has been coming to Belle Glade twice a month for over a year.

SHIP is funded through a grant sponsored by the Florida Department of Elder Affairs and the Florida Department of Health.

She started her mission at the Loading Ramp off S.W. 5th Street, but found there was a need for more than education. She was struck by the overwhelming poverty and wanted to help with residents' basic needs of food, clothing, etc.

She contacted Father William F. Collins with the Poverello Center in Ft. Lauderdale and got donations of food, clothing and toys for the children.

Every second and fourth Thursday at 5 p.m. Schaffer can be found at the Haitian American Community Council building next to Affordable Cleaners.

She starts her Thursday at "The Tree", a gathering place on Martin Luther King Blvd. and Sixth Street where the men spend their days playing cards, swapping stories, and sometimes a bottle.

At first, Schaffer said she was reluctant to go to this place where a white woman is almost never seen or welcomed, but that was before she met former City Commissioner Dan Bythwood. When he heard about her mission to educate the older population and bring them food and clothing she said he told her, "Come with me."

He took her to "The Tree" and introduced her to the men and told them she was there to help.

"Now, when I pull up, some of the men will even help me unload the van," she said.

She also goes to the Haitian Catholic Center and the Health Department and gives away items.

But Schaffer wonders if anyone is really listening to her message, if they're really reading the slick brochures she passes out along with the bread and canned goods.

So, she has another idea for a way to reach the over 50 population...through the Glades' 63 documented churches.

She has invited all the pastors and their spouses to a luncheon conference on Saturday, Sept. 18 at the Drawbridge Cafe. She wants them to com-

Commissioners will ask residents to consider locked gates

By Debra Miller
Staff Reporter

Pahokee Commissioners defeated an ordinance at Tuesday night's commission meeting requiring a locked gate on any bridge constructed over the Lake Canah along the levee at Toe Okeechobee.

The ordinance was proposed several weeks ago because of a recent lack of security on the levee but determined the gates would not help secure the area unless everyone used a locked gate. Present homeowners would be exempt from the ordinance.

Commissioners did decide to write letters to homeowners who have a bridge asking them to consider putting up a locked gate.

In other business, a resident asked commissioners for a stronger police presence in crime ridden neighborhoods.

City Manager Ken Schenck told residents the police department was currently short two officers. The department is currently taking applications to fill the positions.

Commissioners set criteria for the establishment of a bed and breakfast type inn within the city. Several residents have expressed an interest in making their home a bed and breakfast.

PACE Center in Belle Glade to close June 30

Belle Glade PACE Center for Girls, Inc. is moving to West Palm Beach in August. The Belle Glade center will close at the end of this school year and not offer summer programs.

PACE (Practical, Academic and Cultural Education) is a nationally recognized program designed to provide an alternative to the institutionalization of troubled at-risk girls 12-18 years old.

The Belle Glade center, staffed to teach, counsel and provide services to 50 girls, has typically been underutilized for its funded capacity, according to Judy Joffe, media contact for PACE. The Belle Glade center, reportedly never reached full capacity and has never maintained a waiting list, a common occurrence at many of the other 16 PACE centers statewide.

Ms. Joffe said a new West Palm Beach center will be in a more central location to serve a much larger list of at-risk girls, as well as being more central to seven area Department of Juvenile Justice offices.

"Relocation of the center would provide an opportunity for the PACE Center for Girls to expand its services to include all of Palm Beach County. PACE Center for Girls historically has demonstrated a continuous improvement model that actively works to improve its performance and service delivery," said William David Kerr, with the Department of Juvenile Justice District 9. "Its relocation would be beneficial in meeting both the programmatic and funding needs."

Based on the ability to serve more students and recent changes in funding guidelines, the Belle Glade center will be officially closed on June 30. Officials say the Glades students currently enrolled will be given priority for admission to the new location and transportation will be provided.

Officials also said that during the summer, the staff will also be encouraged to apply for positions at the new site.

"We are applying for a grant to provide outreach services to additional area students," said LaWanda Reviera, President and CEO to the PACE Center of Glades local board.

Many should stay put during hurricane

By Mike Lyons

Heavy rains returned to Honduras and Nicaragua last week producing more flooding and more heartache. The two Central American countries are trying to recover from Hurricane Mitch, a powerful late-season storm that killed at least 9,000 people and left thousands more homeless.

Mitch, the strongest October hurricane in history, dropped several feet of rain across the two countries, swelling rivers that swept whole villages away and creating mud slides that buried hundreds of victims.

An accurate death toll may never be known, but one fact is clear, not since 1780 has an Atlantic hurricane caused so many deaths.

A number of factors contributed to the high death toll, including the region's mountainous terrain, the slow movement of the storm and the poor construction of most homes.

Obviously, something like that couldn't happen in the United States. Or could it?

"It can happen here," said Jerry Jerrell, the director of the National Hurricane Center. "But not in the way it occurred in Central America."

Florida's flat topography and better-built homes doesn't worry Jerrell. He is concerned, however, that too many people will try to run from the storm.

"We try to evacuate too many

people," said Jerrell. "Most people shouldn't evacuate."

If you live on a barrier island, a flood-prone area or in a mobile home, you should seek shelter somewhere safe. If you live in a regular house, however, Jerrell says your best chance of survival is to stay in that house.

"My fear is that we're going to have thousands of people on the highway that are going to get caught in a hurricane," said Jerrell. "Then, you have very little chance of surviving."

Thanks to improvements in hurricane tracking and warning, fewer people have been killed in recent hurricanes. Hurricane Andrew, for example, one of the strongest and most destructive storms in history, claimed just 26 lives.

Still, Jerrell is concerned that a weak storm that intensifies quickly or a hurricane that takes an unexpected turn could produce major loss of life. Hurricane Opal is a good example.

Early in the evening of October 4, 1995, Hurricane Opal, a strong hurricane packing winds of 115 mph, was drifting north in the central Gulf of Mexico.

Twelve hours later the storm had intensified into a powerful category four hurricane with winds close to 150 mph. Even more disturbing, Opal had increased its forward speed, taking aim at Florida's panhandle.

Highways were packed with fleeing residents, yet disaster was averted when nearly everyone was able to find shelter. A National Hurricane Center report concluded, "there were no reported deaths due to storm surge flooding, which is remarkable in view of the vulnerable population and extensive salt water damage observed."

Yet, Jerrell is worried that the next time a storm like Opal heads toward a coastline the outcome will be very different.

Jerrell says that now is the time to determine your evacuation status. If you don't have to leave your home when a hurricane threatens, then Jerrell says you should stay put. After all, there is no place like home.

"I'm hoping they'll give a year long commitment. The only way this is going to work is if all the pastors and their spouses get committed to this," said Schaffer.

In return, the pastor's wives will be featured in "Healthy Women" a health magazine for Ethnic Women which is based in West Palm Beach.

Schaffer also wants the pastors who commit to the program to be featured with their photographs in a New Millennium Calendar.

The deadline to register for the conference is June 30.

ER Chronicles: Tape it up and get me out of here

Arlen R. Stauffer, M.D.

While Sid's Friday night at Pub Six had begun like all his Friday nights - beer and pool - this one was definitely turning out to be different. The tall brunette that he had inadvertently insulted was now spitting beer in Sid's face as she threw a punch. Sid was sober enough to slide his head past the oncoming fist, and to wrap his arms around the woman from behind her.

He would hold her until she was more calm, he thought; he had never punched a woman before this, and didn't want to start now.

But this woman did not want to be calm. She whipped her head to the right, and bit down on the skin above Sid's biceps. "Ahhh! You..." Sid reflexively pulled back on his arm; the skin tore, and the blood ran down under his elbow. He drew up his fists, but quickly thought better of it, and turned away. He hustled toward the Pub Six restroom to wash his arm.

The bartender called the local police.

Five hours later, Sid was on a stretcher in the Oceanview Hospital ER. He had finished a couple more beers with his Friday night friends, and when the slow bleeding continued, decided to go to the ER. It was now midnight.

He did tell the ER triage nurse what had happened, though it was quite a slam to his usual macho self-confidence to admit that a woman had done this to him.

Sid rolled his disbelieving eyes as a woman walked into his ER room and introduced herself as the doctor. Emergency physician Tammy Cortez did not offer a handshake; there was blood drying on Sid's right hand.

"I suppose you're going to lecture me about going to bars and fighting with women," Sid said sarcastically.

Cortez smiled and shook her head.

"No. No lecture. I suppose you're old enough to know what a man should and should not be doing." She reached for the bottle of Betadine after donning a plastic face shield and protective gloves and a gown.

Sid winced as the physician began scrubbing the injured area with the disinfectant.

"This will sting a bit, but it's important. Bite wounds get infected pretty easily, so we try to prevent any problems."

Then, appearing even more concerned, Cortez added, "I'm going to numb this area, so I'll be able to see how deep this goes. It looks like quite a tear."

"Great," Sid retorted. "More pain."

"This will burn, Sid," Cortez said the needle around the edges of the bite, injecting lidocaine anesthetic.

"Can't you just tape it up and get me out of here, doc?"

"Now remember that I said we need to be real careful about infection here, Sid."

With sterile surgical instruments, Cortez probed deep within the wound.

"Well, it doesn't look like it got all the way into the muscle, Sid, but it is pretty deep."

Cortez pulled out a large syringe from the instrument package, and began flushing the anesthetized wound with sterile saline solution. The saline flowed with force into and around the wound, while a clear plastic adapter on the end of the syringe prevented the solution from spraying onto Sid or the physician.

"Sid, the wound is deep enough so that I don't think it would be a good idea to sew it up tight at this time. That could increase the likelihood of infection. It's not gaping open too far on its own, so I think the best plan now is to clean it up and just put the edges of the wound loosely together."

"Whatever, doc," Sid really just wanted to get this done and get back to Pub Six; he didn't want to think about the "fight" or its consequences any more. He had more beer to drink and more pool to play.

A nurse administered a tetanus shot in Sid's other arm as Cortez finished the wound care. A large sterile dressing was applied.

"I talked with the cops," the nurse reported. "They have reported the incident to the Health Department, too."

They'll be calling you, Sid."

"All right. Enough already. Can I go now?" Sid's patience had disappeared.

"One more paper to sign, Sid, and then you're on your way."

Cortez and the nurse both shook their heads as they watched Sid swagger toward the ER door.

With raised eyebrows and a sigh, Cortez said, "Nothing like a Friday night in the ER."

Animal bite wounds, including those from other humans, can cause a variety of injuries. Lacerations of skin, muscle, tendons, nerves, and blood vessels can occur, as can crush injuries of these and other structures. The crushing or twisting nature of bite wounds may even cause fractures of bone.

Because of a propensity for infection, bite wounds must be evaluated and treated carefully.

A thorough inspection is performed to evaluate the various structures in the area of the bite, and to determine which ones are injured; how extensive and deep the wound is, and whether there are any teeth or other foreign substances inside the wound.

Infection is always a threat in bite wounds, and multiple types of bacteria may be involved in infected human bites. Some areas of the body are more likely to become infected than are other areas. Hand and foot injuries are particularly susceptible. In addition, some medical conditions, such as diabetes or immune deficiencies, are associated with a higher risk of infection in such wounds.

Use sunscreen, shirt and hat to protect skin from sunburn

Katrina Elsen, Contributing Editor

"Slip! Slip! Slap!" Believe it or not, those are sounds you do want your youngsters to make this summer.

"Slip! Slip! Slap!" is a campaign from the American Cancer Society, reminding everyone of the dangers of too much exposure to the sun.

Before going out in the sun, the Cancer Society advises you to Slip! on a shirt; Slap! on sunscreen; and, Slap! on a hat.

"Just walking to and from the car exposes South Floridians to dangerous ultraviolet rays. Therefore, making sun protection a daily habit is very important," stated dermatologist Dr. Steven D. Shapiro.

The "Slip! Slap! Slap!" campaign targets parents and preteens with the basics of sun protection. Building sun care habits into your family's daily routine is fun and easy and one of the most important defenses against cancer.

Florida pioneers and the Cracker Cowhunters knew overexposure to the sun was dangerous. In old photos you see them wearing long-sleeved shirts and wide-brimmed hats. Modern "sun worshippers" could learn from their example.

According to the Cancer Society, 3,000 Floridians will be diagnosed with melanoma this year and 495 will die of the disease. Melanoma is the most serious form of skin cancer.

Cancer Society research indicates more than one million people develop skin cancer each year. Ninety percent of these cases could be avoided through proper protection from the sun.

In summer, the Florida sun is very strong and very dangerous to the skin.

The American Cancer Society recommends staying out of the sun when it is strongest, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. (If you read any Kipling, you might remember the rhyme which warns that only "mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the mid-day sun.")

If you must go outdoors during those peak hours, use sunscreen and wear a hat and protective clothing.

Choose a sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or higher, advises the Cancer Society. For the most effective results, apply sunscreen about 20 minutes before going outside. Reapply as necessary, especially after swimming or drying skin on a towel.

Kids love the new brightly colored sunscreens. One advantage they offer is that the parent can see when the sunscreen has worn off.

When you slip on a shirt, choose one that has a tight, woven fabric for the best protection from the sun. Hold it up to a light. If you can see through the fabric, it is not woven tightly enough.

Hats should have a wide brim. The wider the brim, the better shaded your face and neck will be. If you wear a baseball cap, remember to protect your neck, face and ears with sunscreen.

Sunglasses are also a good idea. They protect your eyes from ultraviolet light and also protect the delicate skin around your eyes from sunburn.

Wearing a hat and sunglasses will also reduce the amount of squinting you do in bright sunlight. This will help reduce the chances of developing wrinkles around the eyes or deepening the "crow's feet" you already have.

Babies and small children are especially vulnerable to sunburn. Young babies under the age of six months should be kept in the shade or covered up, since sunscreen is not recommended for their delicate skin.

Traffic sign

"Yes. I'm calling about the traffic sign at the corner of Avenue E and Southwest 10th Street. The sign reads 'no turn on red', but when I'm at the light I see a lot of drivers turning on red. They don't turn during school hours, but they are turning at other hours.

I really want someone to address this question because I'm often honked at at this intersection and I'd like to know if I'm in the wrong and I'm supposed to turn.

If I'm not supposed to turn, then maybe someone needs to put a sign up there indicating what time you're not supposed to turn on red or enforce it more.

It's beginning to get very aggravating because no one is stopping at this sign.

Thank you very much."

our pressmen and hopefully this can be corrected. Thank you for your concern and your patronage."

Girl's bike stolen

"Katin Ramos, a 10-year-old at Gove Elementary School won first place in collecting the most walkathon donations to purchase violins for the music department.

She had a special field trip Thursday, May 27th to go to Walmart to pick out the bike that she had won.

The next night, someone stole it from her carport. After all her hard work to win someone is getting a "free ride."

Anyone can buy a bike, but this bike was her trophy.

This is a plea to the community to be on the lookout for the bike and report it to the Belle Glade Police Department if you think you've seen it.

It is a girl's, 24-inch Huffy, ultra-terrain shocks bike. It's color is deep purple with black accents.

Parents and neighbors need to open their eyes, because somewhere out there is a new bike that is out of place and its ownership is questionable.

Please report it to the Belle Glade Police Department, (Case Number 99-12800) so that it may be reunited with the girl who won it. Thank you very much."

Michael R. Miller, Director of Public Safety/Chief of Police responds: "The prohibition reference to 'Right Turn On Red for the Northbound and Southbound traffic on S.W. 10th Street as it intersects with Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard' is designed to promote traffic safety at this busy intersection."

The intersection is properly signed and the prohibition is in effect at all times.

I am sure some irresponsible drivers violate the laws concerning traffic safety at this intersection and the Belle Glade Police Department will increase patrol in this area to address the problem.

Thank you for expressing your concerns."

What was the outcome?

"I'm a concerned citizen of Pahokee. I wish to remain anonymous.

I was very curious about what the outcome was with the fire chief and the Pahokee firefighters.

I want to know if the firefighters are actually receiving the appropriate management style from the fire chief and if they are getting along with each other.

I hope that things are going well because my life is at stake here."

Thank you."

Out of focus

"Hi. I was just looking at the paper and I noticed how blurry it was. I was just wondering if that will be corrected, because it's kind of hard to read.

Editor's response: You're right, some pages in the June 3 edition of The Sun were blurry. This happens when the registration is off just slightly on the presses. One of the pages was also too light and hard to read. I'll speak with

Letters to the Editor

Place our Trust Fund into a trust

Dear Editor:
Social Security is a pay-as-you-go program funded by taxpayers to pay benefits to people receiving benefits. The defect in the structure of Social Security requires that the ratio of taxpayers to people receiving benefits remain large to prevent the program from failing.

All this hoopla about saving Social Security is the result of the retirement bulge that will start forming in 2008 when the first of the boomers become 62. The good thing about the boomer bulge is that they are in the prime of their careers when their income is highest allowing a buildup of money in the Trust Fund to create the current $650 billion surplus.

Unfortunately, many believe the Trust Fund, which is the intended recipient of the taxes, is believed to be as impregnable as Fort Knox. Not so. Since the founding of Social Security during the Great Depression, politicians have used Trust Fund surpluses to fund pork-barrel projects to gain re-election. This occurs because Congress co-mingles the Trust Fund contributions with income taxes in formulating the federal budget. For example, the 1998 $70 billion budget surplus existed only because Congress included the 1998 $99 billion Social Security surplus when the actual budget showed deficit.

In order to prevent these Congressional shenanigans from occurring over and over again it is mandatory that the Trust Fund be removed from control of the politicians and be made into an autonomous agency like the Federal Reserve having a charter to collect, invest and distribute the trust money in a prudent manner. Allow me to propose that the new agency be called the United States Social Security Trust.

Sincerely,
Robert A. Dahlgren

Biologist employs tiny radio transmitters to track travels of Everglades bass

Tiny radio transmitters implanted in largemouth bass may answer questions about the impact of fluctuating water levels in the Everglades marsh.

Do bass swim out into the deeper canals before being trapped during long-term droughts? Or do many bass end up stranded and die in the marsh? What water levels are optimal for bass survival?

Those are some of the questions asked by Jon Fury, a fisheries biologist who heads the Everglades Investigation Project for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFC). He and his assistant, Tim Roettiger, are currently tracking six radio-tagged bass through the 210-mile-square Water Conservation Area 2A west of Ft. Lauderdale in Broward County. They plan on tagging four more bass before the study concludes.

Fury emphasized that this is field research designed to uncover information helpful to the better management of largemouth bass in the Everglades. "I hope our findings will help us better advise water managers on how artificially manipulated water levels impact the bass in the marsh," Fury said.

The biologists make bi-weekly trips to the area and use a portable radio receiver with antennae to locate the fish. Fury said he can pick up the signal up to a half-mile away. The tracking study began in November and will continue for another six months.

In that time the water in the marsh has receded from three feet in depth to as low as four inches with isolated depressions slightly deeper. Fury said each tagged bass has reacted to the dropping water levels differently.

One bass headed towards even shallower water and finally became trapped in a three foot deep pothole. Another went straight for the 20 foot deep canal and, so far, has stayed. A third tagged bass traveled from the marsh into the deep water canal and then, inexplicably, returned to the shallow water.

The distance traveled by each tagged bass has also varied. Some have traveled less than a mile. The record holder is Bass Number 813 which swam seven miles from the interior marsh to a canal junction near the Sawgrass Fish Camp.

"I expected that as water levels dropped, we'd find the bass moving to deeper water if at all possible," Fury said. "We didn't find that. Most of them stayed in the same general area. When the situation became critical, they took refuge in depressions teeming with forage fish."

Continued tracking of the bass is growing more difficult as the water in the marsh recedes even further, and hampers air boat operation. Fury said the air boat rides are increasingly bumpy, and getting stuck in the dried-up marsh more likely.

"If this continues, we might not be able to get within range of these tagged bass in another week or so," he said.

"At the same time the bass themselves are captives of the few remaining holes and depressions. Whether they will survive until water levels rise again is just one more question the study hopes to answer."

The computers are heavily used by students for both homework assignments and educational games. With the recent addition of the Internet, library staff expects an increase in use.

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP SERIES

Everyone else had to pit, but not Bobby Labonte, and when the green flag waved for the final 105 laps, the result was Labonte's first victory of the season. Jeff Gordon was the only other car on the lead lap as he, third-place finisher Mark Martin, fourth-place Tony Stewart and all the other leaders had to pit in the waning laps. For the second week in a row, both Joe Gibbs-owned Pontiacs, Labonte and Stewart, finished in the top four.

BUSCH GRAND NATIONAL

Dale Earnhardt Jr. won for the first time this year as well, defending his title in the MBNA Platinum 200 at Dover Downs. Earnhardt, the 1998 series champion, took a 34-point lead over Matt Kenseth.

CRAFTSMAN TRUCK SERIES

Jack Sprague, the 1997 SuperTrucks champ, won the nighttime event at Bristol Motor Speedway. It was Chevy driver Sprague's second victory in a row. Sprague was never threatened in the closing laps, finishing nearly 4½ seconds in front of Dodge driver Stacy Compton.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Kenny Wallace vs. Jeremy Mayfield

Wallace started fourth at Dover and was in the top 10 all day long until, to his way of thinking, Mayfield "lost it and hit me in the left side and put me in the wall." That's not the way Mayfield saw it.

NASCAR This Week's Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "Wallace is a pretty straight shooter and may well have thought Mayfield took him out, but the replay indicated that Wallace actually hit the wall before there was any contact with Mayfield."

AROUND THE GARAGE

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

DOVER, Del. — Scott Eggleston was named crew chief for Team Sabco's No. 40 Coors Light Chevrolet and driver Sterling Marlin. He moved the 20 feet or so from where he was crew chief for Team Sabco's BellSouth Chevrolet and driver Joe Nemechek. Team manager Tony Glover will serve as interim crew chief for Nemechek.

LOOKING FORWARD TO IT: Rusty Wallace likes the upcoming stretch of Winston Cup races between now and mid-July.

"It's kind of an enjoyable stretch because I get to go to some race tracks that I haven't been to in a while," said Wallace. "There's something about when I get to Pocono. I like going to Pocono. I don't know what it is, but I like going up there. There are a couple favorite restaurants we hang out at, and the condos we stay at are pretty cool. I have fun up there."

There are a lot of race tracks I like because I have fun, and there are some that I just hate. I like the track, but I hate the surroundings."

THANKS JOE: Not the least of Tony Stewart's advantages

in the race for Winston Cup rookie of the year is the owner who brought him to the Winston Cup Series. "I couldn't have asked for a better car owner than Joe. In this business, to put a team on the track you're talking big dollars, and I'm not talking six digits, you're talking seven digits and sometimes eight. Sometimes you lose your focus, and a people tend to become objects at a certain point."

"I've been with race teams where those people were treated like material or tools instead of people. One thing about Joe Gibbs, everyone is treated as an equal. He's there, willing to listen and willing to help you any way he can. Everybody's so worried about the business side, they forget it's people who make it happen. He really takes care of his people. He makes you feel like you're special."

POTENTIAL DARLINGTON MILLIONAIRES: The top five finishers in the Coca-Cola 500 will be eligible for the No Bull Five $1 million bonus in the Southern 500 Sept. 5 at Darlington. For the record, they are Jeff Burton, Bobby Labonte, Mark Martin, Tony Stewart and Dale Jarrett.

PROFILE

Ken Schrader

John Clark/NASCAR This Week

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

One of America's more versatile drivers is a credible 13th in the Winston Cup point standings, but Ken Schrader still longs for his first victory since June 2, 1991, at Dover Downs. Schrader, a former sprint-car national champion, was Winston Cup rookie of the year in 1985, when he drove for Richmond, Va., car owner June Donlavey. He finished a career-best fourth in the point standings as recently as 1994.

HOMETOWN: Born in St. Louis, Mo., raised in Fenton, Mo., lives in Concord, N.C.

AGE: 44

WIFE: Ann

CHILDREN: Dorothy Lynn (9), Sheldon Bradley (3)

CAR: No. 33 Skoal Chevrolet Monte Carlo, owned by Andy Petree
FIRSTS: Start (July 14, 1984, at Nashville), pole (March 27, 1987, at Darlington), win (July 31, 1988, at Talladega)

CAREER STATISTICS: 437 starts; 23 poles; 4 wins, 64 top-five finishes, 167 top-10s, almost $13 million in career earnings.

WHY DO YOU THINK THE MIDWEST HAS BECOME SUCH A POTENT PRODUCER OF WINSTON CUP DRIVERS? "There are a whole lot of series that give good preparation. In the USAC Silver Crown Series, which a bunch of us came from, the cars are pretty heavy. They're nothing like Cup but still pretty heavy and underdressed. You have to make them around, and that's kind of like a Cup car. In the ASA (American Speed Association), a Midwest stock-car circuit, you learn the chassis knowledge you need. It's just made more people more aware of the people out there in those series."

DO YOU HAVE ANY DESIRE TO PULL THE INDY-CHARLOTTE DOUBLE, LIKE TONY STEWART AND JOHN ANDRETTI? "If I'm going to be pulling double duty, I have no desire to run either a CART or an IRL car. I like my old stock cars. I have no desire to be involved with anything but a stock car or maybe a truck."

HOW MUCH DOES IT BOTHER YOU NOT TO HAVE WON RECENTLY? "It's tough when you're not winning every week. Everyone in this sport is doing it because they want to win races. You just have to do the best you can to keep it up and put something out on the horizon that you are working in the direction of winning races. We'd like to move up to the top five (in races), instead of the top 10, and we need to get in the top 10 in points and work toward the top five."

Your Turn

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,

Could you explain how the money (prize) for each race is distributed by positions, 1 to 43? There (have) been quite a few times where a driver who finishes closer to last still gets more prize money than a driver who finishes in a better position.

Paul Green
Dubuque, Iowa

NASCAR has bonus plans, the most prominent being the Winners Circle, which rewards the most successful teams and the ones which successfully qualify for all the races. When a team is on such a plan or plans, its prize money is enhanced at every race. This accounts for the seeming discrepancies.

Dear NASCAR This Week,

In 1998, NASCAR and Goodyear developed a rain tire (and) also had the owners install (windshield) wipers. So why haven't they finished any races in the rain?

James E. Dougherty
Jacksonville, N.C.

The tire you mention was developed ONLY for road courses. No practical means of racing on ovals with rain tires has been developed.

Dear NASCAR This Week,

How do I go about getting tickets for the next Daytona 500 race? Any information on the race would be helpful.

Mary Gasser
St. Cloud, Minn.

Call (904) 253-7223. We suggest you do so right away. They are hard to come by.

Trackside Trivia

- Who was the first driver to be black-flagged during a race at Daytona?
- Who won three straight Convertible Division championships?

Answers: 1. Herman "The Turle" Beem, for running the first eight laps of a 100-mile qualifying race without a helmet, in 1960; 2. Bob Welborn.

CREW OF THE WEEK

• Sometimes calculating fuel mileage on a Winston Cup stock car is a risky proposition. Crew chief Jimmy Makar figured that his driver, Bobby Labonte, could go 106 laps around Dover Downs International Speedway on one tank of fuel, so Labonte topped off his fuel tank with precisely that number of laps to go in the MBNA Platinum 400. No one else could or would make such a decisive decision, and as a result, Labonte won the race by the largest margin, 22.071 seconds, of the season to date.

Eggleston named crew chief for Sterling Marlin

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

DOVER, Del. — Scott Eggleston was named crew chief for Team Sabco's No. 40 Coors Light Chevrolet and driver Sterling Marlin. He moved the 20 feet or so from where he was crew chief for Team Sabco's BellSouth Chevrolet and driver Joe Nemechek. Team manager Tony Glover will serve as interim crew chief for Nemechek.

LOOKING FORWARD TO IT: Rusty Wallace likes the upcoming stretch of Winston Cup races between now and mid-July.

"It's kind of an enjoyable stretch because I get to go to some race tracks that I haven't been to in a while," said Wallace. "There's something about when I get to Pocono. I like going to Pocono. I don't know what it is, but I like going up there. There are a couple favorite restaurants we hang out at, and the condos we stay at are pretty cool. I have fun up there."

There are a lot of race tracks I like because I have fun, and there are some that I just hate. I like the track, but I hate the surroundings."

THANKS JOE: Not the least of Tony Stewart's advantages

in the race for Winston Cup rookie of the year is the owner who brought him to the Winston Cup Series. "I couldn't have asked for a better car owner than Joe. In this business, to put a team on the track you're talking big dollars, and I'm not talking six digits, you're talking seven digits and sometimes eight. Sometimes you lose your focus, and a people tend to become objects at a certain point."

"I've been with race teams where those people were treated like material or tools instead of people. One thing about Joe Gibbs, everyone is treated as an equal. He's there, willing to listen and willing to help you any way he can. Everybody's so worried about the business side, they forget it's people who make it happen. He really takes care of his people. He makes you feel like you're special."

POTENTIAL DARLINGTON MILLIONAIRES: The top five finishers in the Coca-Cola 500 will be eligible for the No Bull Five $1 million bonus in the Southern 500 Sept. 5 at Darlington. For the record, they are Jeff Burton, Bobby Labonte, Mark Martin, Tony Stewart and Dale Jarrett.

Who's Hot... Who's Not

- HOT: Bobby Labonte, second and first in the last two races.
- NOT: Ernie Irvan, no better than 22nd in the last nine races.

Pahokee Elementary School
The end of the year is always challenging for elementary schools. This year they developed "Peace and Pride Month," a program filled with exciting activities and rewards for children keeping the school safe and orderly until the last day.

Over the past month Pahokee Elementary has encouraged all students to be fight-free. For every week that a class went with no fights, they could move to the next level. Since the school will be torn down this summer for new construction, decorating the walls was used as an incentive for being fight-free. Students who achieved level one were able to sign the wall with their class and painted a gold star for level two. Classes who went three weeks with no fights were able to paint a mural on the wall outside their classroom. Level four is the most exciting level, with principal Betty Lawson promising to change her normal professional look to a more trendy look for a day to reward classrooms that had a peaceful month. She will be braiding her hair in long, blue and white braids (school colors). She will also be dressed as the average Pahokee Elementary student in jeans, a "Pooh" t-shirt and "stack shoes."

Classrooms will be invited to the cafeteria to see this surprise where Mrs. Lawson will be reading "Oh, The Places You Will Go" by Dr. Seuss.

Almost every class at Pahokee Elementary will be invited to the "Fight-Free Assembly" for having no fights.

In addition to "Fight-Free Month," all adults at Pahokee Elementary, (including bus drivers and volunteers) carried a pouch filled with Peace & Pride tickets. Children caught doing an act of kindness or a classroom doing a superb job following the rules were given a ticket. For every 20 tickets collected the class received a letter to glue on a poster on their door. The goal was to spell "Peace & Pride" which earned them an ice-cream party. Friday was the last day to earn tickets and again, almost every class at the school earned the ice-cream party, which will take place on the last day of school.

Finally, fourth graders who have raised their "Florida Writes" score by one quartile or who scored in the 3rd and 4th quartile will be busy making a quilt this week that will hang in the new school. We are very proud of the children. It has been a much calmer end of the year than in the past.

Free summer lunches for eligible children

The School District of Palm Beach County will sponsor the "Summer Food Service Program" for Children at 32 schools this summer.

The meals will be free of charge to all children living in the vicinity of the schools regardless of whether they are enrolled in summer school.

The program is similar to the National School Lunch Program. It provides nutritionally balanced meals to needy children regardless of race, color, creed, religion, sex, handicap, age or national origin during summer vacation when school meals are not available. All children 18 or younger are eligible for a meal at no charge.

Participating schools in the Glades are: Glades Central, Gladeview Elementary, Pahokee High, West Area School of Choice, KEO/Camp Point, Lake Shore Middle and Pioneer Park Elementary.

The programs are only approved for geographical areas of need where one-half of the children qualify for free or reduced price meals during school year.

Belle Glade Elementary
On Thursday, May 27, Belle Glade Elementary held the end of year student Art Exhibit in the Media Center. The juried exhibit featured art work by students in Grades K-5.

The winners were:
Jeffery Medina - 1st place
Tania Martinez-2nd place
Jeffery Medina-3rd place
Aston Samuels -Honorable Mention.
Congratulations to the winners. The students did a great job with all of the 61 displays.

Pahokee Elementary School
The end of the year is always challenging for elementary schools. This year they developed "Peace and Pride Month," a program filled with exciting activities and rewards for children keeping the school safe and orderly until the last day.

Over the past month Pahokee Elementary has encouraged all students to be fight-free. For every week that a class went with no fights, they could move to the next level. Since the school will be torn down this summer for new construction, decorating the walls was used as an incentive for being fight-free. Students who achieved level one were able to sign the wall with their class and painted a gold star for level two. Classes who went three weeks with no fights were able to paint a mural on the wall outside their classroom. Level four is the most exciting level, with principal Bettye Lawson promising to change her normal professional look to a more trendy look for a day to reward classrooms that had a peaceful month. She will be braiding her hair in long, blue and white braids (school colors). She will also be dressed as the average Pahokee Elementary student in jeans, a "Pooch" t-shirt and "stack shoes."

Classrooms will be invited to the cafeteria to see this surprise where Mrs. Lawson will be reading "Oh, The Places You Will Go" by Dr. Seuss.

Almost every class at Pahokee Elementary will be invited to the "Fight-Free Assembly" for having no fights.

In addition to "Fight-Free Month," all adults at Pahokee Elementary (including bus drivers and volunteers) carried a pouch filled with Peace & Pride tickets. Children caught doing an act of kindness or a classroom doing a superb job following the rules were given a ticket. For every 20 tickets collected the class received a letter to glue on a poster on their door. The goal was to spell "Peace & Pride" which earned them an ice-cream party. Friday was the last day to earn tickets and again, almost every class at the school earned the ice-cream party, which will take place on the last day of school.

Finally, fourth graders who have raised their "Florida Writes" score by one quartile or who scored in the 3rd and 4th quartile will be busy making a quilt this week that will hang in the new school. We are very proud of the children. It has been a much calmer end of the year than the past.

The School District of Palm Beach County will sponsor the "Summer Food Service Program" for children at 32 schools this summer.

The meals will be free of charge to all children living in the vicinity of the schools regardless of whether they are enrolled in summer school.

The program is similar to the National School Lunch Program. It provides nutritionally balanced meals to needy children regardless of race, color, creed, religion, sex, handicap, age or national origin during summer vacation when school meals are not available.

All children 18 or younger are eligible for a meal at no charge. Participating schools in the Glades are: Glades Central, Gladesview Elementary, Pahokee High, West Area School of Choice, KEO/Cano Point, Lake Shore Middle and Pioneer Park Elementary.

GGH GETS NEW ULTRASOUND SYSTEM... Undiagnosed heart disease remains a problem of major proportions across the nation. But Glades General Hospital has taken a major step to correct the situation locally.

The reason: The Vingmed System Five, a state-of-the-art cardiac ultrasound system that combines the traditional safety of diagnostic ultrasound with a number of breakthrough diagnostic capabilities, was recently purchased by the hospital to serve Glades residents. According to Ultrasound Technician Jose Mendez, who is demonstrating the machine on Del Goforth, RN, the system is less costly than many procedures. Ultrasound is generally considered one of the safest and least costly diagnostic tools available today, so safe that it's routinely used for fetal monitoring, instead of requiring radiation or contrast dyes, ultrasound simply uses high-frequency sound waves to generate images of the heart. Very often, it may eliminate the need for more invasive procedures, including cardiac catheterization.

The Vingmed System Five builds on this proven foundation to take ultrasound imaging of the heart to new levels of performance.

Glades General Hospital selected the System Five only after a careful evaluation of the available technology and they believe the System Five has breakthrough capabilities that would help diagnose cardiac disease more accurately and earlier than ever before.
